Welcome!

We are thrilled to welcome you to the 11th annual Oxford Bone Infection Conference (OBIC) taking place on 21-22 March 2024 in the beautiful settings of the historical Examination Schools.

We hope to see as many as possible in Oxford and expect about 250-300 attendees within the field of managing bone infections from mainly United Kingdom but also from the rest of Europe.

The programme topics of OBIC2024 are:

- Extreme plastics
- For the love of antibiotics
- Non-bacterial infections: medical management and implications for surgery
- Phage therapy: barriers and progress
- Radiological pearls and image mapping
- Updates in Fracture Related Infections
- What's new in laboratory diagnostics?
- Heads, shoulders, knees, and toes: interactive workshops

We look forward to seeing you all in March 2024!

On behalf of the OBIC Organising Committee,

Dr Matt Scarborough
Organising Committee Chair

About the Oxford Bone Infection Unit

The Bone Infection Unit (BIU) at the Nuffield Orthopaedic Centre (NOC) is part of the Oxford University Hospitals (OUH) NHS Trust. It remains dedicated to the investigation and treatment of all aspects of bone and joint infection, including chronic long-bone osteomyelitis, diabetic foot infections, spinal osteomyelitis, and orthopaedic device-related infection. Many cases also have a plastic surgeon involved. There is a full multi-disciplinary team and a large complex outpatient antibiotic therapy (COPAT) programme.

There is close liaison with the infection control team throughout the NOC. The unit is also closely integrated with the OUH departments of adult and paediatric infectious diseases and microbiology. The BIU is a major contributor to the UK Standards for Microbiological Investigations (specimens from prosthetic joint infections and osteomyelitis). Furthermore, the BIU is an ESCMID collaborative centre.
