Scientific Programme & Abstracts

The programme will feature lectures, workshops, interactive sessions and industry symposia.
Internationally renowned speakers will deliver state-of-the-art lectures, including the prestigious annual Cierny-Mader Lecture, which recognises excellence and innovation in the multidisciplinary management of bone and joint infection.

Abstract submission will open in November 2026. Further information will be announced on the conference website and in the OBIC newsletter.

Participant Profile

OBIC is founded on a multidisciplinary approach. The conference brings together orthopaedic and trauma surgeons, plastic surgeons, infection specialists, microbiologists, nursing and therapy professionals, and researchers at all career stages.
We expect approximately 275-300 attendees, primarily from the United Kingdom, as well as participants from across Europe. OBIC 2026 welcomed participants from 23 countries.

CPD Points & EthicalMedTech Conference Vetting System

The organisers will apply for CPD accreditation.
The conference will be submitted to the EthicalMedTech Conference Vetting System.

About the Oxford Bone Infection Unit

The Bone Infection Unit (BIU) at the Nuffield Orthopaedic Centre (NOC) is part of the Oxford University Hospitals (OUH) NHS Trust. It remains dedicated to the investigation and treatment of all aspects of bone and joint infection, including chronic long-bone osteomyelitis, diabetic foot infections, spinal osteomyelitis, and orthopaedic device-related infection. Many cases also involve a plastic surgeon. There is a full multidisciplinary team and a large complex outpatient antibiotic therapy (COPAT) programme.
For further information about BIU, please visit their website: https://www.ouh.nhs.uk/boneinfection/
